

Together with the tailor, Mr. Omary Juma, we discuss what we can do and with what the girls can start with; tablemats, pillowcases and shopping bags that should work for the beginning. From the sewing room there was good and less good news. Of the girls who have enthusiastically entered the last year, not all were there. But the good news: two girls had come almost daily and are already a help for the tailor; Equally good was that the free seats were occupied again.

bags, Tabelmats and Pillowcases

In order for the training to be completed, we have come up with a kind of an education contract combined with a training program. The aim is to reach the girls who are really interested, to retain them in the long term and to train them properly without pressure. For this we had prepared an agreement -an education contract in German, English and Kiswahili-. The girls were offered a training or education contract -very slim. The content is that the girls should complete 1,000 training hours in one year and in September 2018 we take a kind of exam with the preparation of several practice pieces. Everything is rated and the top five, they get a complete workplace with sewing machine, tool and chair but with the requirement that they have to introduce 5 more girls to tailoring in the following year. The sewing room can of course be used free of charge during this time. This is intended to ensure that on the one hand the equipment of the sewing room stays together and the sewing room is self-financed and developed in the near future. To make sure to have enough orders, contact with safari companies, hotels and restaurants have been made. YES, the fabric dealer was immediately ready to sell our bags, tablemats and pillowcases in his shop. If this all starts well, the sewing room will work independently in one, but at the latest in two years.

The project "a sewing room for street girls" has started really well. With another good development, the project will be self-reliant in one, maybe two, years and will continue to grow and develop. That would be a huge success; We are on the right way and we would like to do more, but our resources are limited.

Finally, as every year, we happily celebrated our annual summer party with all the street children we care on, boys and girls. It has long been clear what's on the plate -Pilaw and chicken- what the kids like the most.
